1. Your request for microfilm copies of all material on [REDACTED] picked up by [REDACTED] and for all reports prepared by [REDACTED] has been discussed with Messrs. [REDACTED] of OCD.

2. OCD feels that this is a matter to be handled directly between the [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]. Once the two interested parties have reached agreement, OCD would be glad to render all possible assistance in making the material available. The [REDACTED] material is such that a considerable amount of close screening of the 50 odd reels would be necessary in order to extract the correspondence and other administrative data which constitute a sizeable part of the collection. OCD believes it would be more satisfactory to have [REDACTED] (who has returned to [REDACTED]) re-film the pertinent data. Inasmuch as continuation of the [REDACTED] project is somewhat uncertain at this time, we suggest that no commitment along this line be made.

3. For your information, OCD just recently received a request from [REDACTED] Washington for any and all [REDACTED] information on the [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] OCD has informed [REDACTED] that very little [REDACTED] material on these areas exists in CIA but that we will make available all such data that is releasable.

4. Apparently the agency enjoys an excellent working relationship with [REDACTED] and OCD expresses the view that this relationship might be jeopardized if we indicate [REDACTED] a desire to place its material in [REDACTED] hands.

5. I realize that this response falls short of the action you had hoped for. However, since there appears to be a mutuality of interest in the material of each other, it should develop that [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] can effect an exchange agreeable to both.
